

Declaration of Consent to the publication of the dissertation on BORIS Theses and e-Diss

BORIS Theses and e-Diss at the University Library of Bern are services to support the open access publication of scholarly works.

The dissertation regulation or the regulation for the doctoral degree in your faculty/deanery will tell you, whether the obligation to publish a dissertation is fulfilled by publishing the full text of the dissertation or whether publishing the introductory section/umbrella will suffice.

Please carefully read our Guidelines about publishing a dissertation on BORIS Theses and e-Diss for further information.

Declaration by the author:

I herewith declare that my dissertation was accepted by the University of Bern and that the electronic version is identical with the printed obligatory copies (if applicable) in content and form (acceptable modifications are defined in the guidelines).

I herewith declare that I have obtained all copyright and privacy rights clearances and that no third-party rights prevent such a publication (details can be found in the guidelines, chapter 3).

I herewith declare that I have chosen and applied an appropriate Creative Commons License. I retain the right to enter other, non-exclusive publishing agreements for the dissertation, as long as the conditions of my chosen Creative Commons License are met by such an agreement (the University Library recommends a CC-BY license, if legally possible).

I herewith transfer to the University Library the right to save my dissertation in its databases or save it in collaboration with third-parties and make the dissertation available to the public in open access. I furthermore transfer to the University Library the right to make my dissertation available in electronic form to the Swiss National Library for the purpose – amongst others – of long-time archiving. I furthermore agree to that my dissertation will be made available via national and international portals.

I take note that the University Library will guarantee access to my dissertation for as long as it is possible and reasonable to do so with justifiable effort considering technological changes. I also note that the dissertation cannot be withdrawn once it has been published. I furthermore agree to the University Library and the Swiss National Library converting (migrating) the dissertation into other file formats should it become technically necessary.

This declaration of consent applies to the full text/ the introductory section, umbrella

Author

Address.....

Postcode, City.....

E-Mail-address

Telephone number

Title of the publication

.....

.....

Date of dissertation defence.....

Please check:

- The abovementioned dissertation can be made available in open access immediately.
- The abovementioned dissertation can be made available in open access as of _____.

Place, date

Author signature

Postal address (scanned declarations are not legally valid):

PhD candidates in the WISO, law and Phil-Hum faculties: your deanery

All other PhD candidates: Universität Bern, Universitätsbibliothek Bern, E-Library, Hochschulstrasse 6, 3012 Bern